Great Shi‘i Works: 'Tahdhib al–Ahkam' and 'Al–Istibsar' by Al–Tusi

The Author

Shaiikh al–ta‘ifa (the teacher of the community) Abu Ja‘far Muhammad b. al–Hasan b. ‘Ali b. al–Hasan al–Tusi was born in Tus in Iran in the year 385 of the Islamic era. His career marks the climax of a very great period in Shi‘ite Islamic scholarship and learning. It was during this period that Shi‘ite scholars were without rivals in the Islamic world. Al–Shaikh al–Tusi’s teachers included al–Shaikh al–Mufid, and the two brothers, members of Ahl al–bait and both outstanding scholars, al–Sharif al–Murtada and al–Sharif al–Radi.

This period of great public Shi‘ite Islamic scholarship had begun with al–Kulaini (died 328/9 A.H.), whose collection of traditions, al–Kafi, is the first of the four major works of Shi‘ite Islamic traditions. It was then continued with al–Shaikh al–Saduq Ibn Babawaih (died 381 A.H.); his great collection of traditions, Man la yahduruh al–faqih, is the second of the major works of traditions. The remaining two major collections of traditions were compiled by al–Shaikh al–Tusi and they are Tahdhib al–ahkam fi sharh al–munqi’ a and al–Istibsar fima ‘khtalaf min al–akhbar.
Al-Shaikh al-Tusi grew up in Tus and began his studies there. In 408 A.H. he left Tus to study in Baghdad. There he first studied under al-Shaikh al-Mufid, who died in 413 A.H. Leadership of the Shi'ite scholars then fell to al-Sharif al-Murtada. The latter remained in this position until his death in 436 A.H. During this time al-Shaikh al-Tusi was closely associated with al-Sharif al-Murtada. His vast scholarship and learning made him a natural successor of al-Sharif al-Murtada as the leading spokesman of Shi'ite Islam. So impressive was his learning that the Abbasid caliph, al-Qadir bi-llah, attended his lectures and sought to honour him.

In the closing years of al-Shaikh al-Tusi's life the political situation in Baghdad and the domains of the Abbasid caliphate was in turmoil. The Saljuqids fiercely anti-Shi'ite, were gaining commanding power in the centre of the Islamic Empire at the expense of the Buyids who had always seemed tolerant to Shi'ite views.

In 447 Tughril-bek the leaders of the Saljuqids entered Baghdad. At this time many of the 'ulama' in Baghdad, both Sunni and Shi'ite were killed. The house of al-Shaikh al-Tusi was burnt down, as were his books and the works he had written in Baghdad, together with important libraries of Shi'ite hooks. Fanaticism against the Shi'a was great.

Al-Shaikh al-Tusi, seeing the danger of remaining in Baghdad, left and went to al-Najaf. Al-Najaf, the city where 'Ali b. Abi Talib had been martyred, was already a very important city in the hearts of Shi'ite Muslims. However, it was al-Shaikh al-Tusi's arrival which was to give that city the impetus to become the leading centre of Shi'ite scholarship. This is a role, which it has maintained down to the present day.

Al-Shaikh al-Tusi died in al-Najaf in 460 A.H. His body was buried in a house there, which was made into a mosque as he had enjoined in his will. Even today his grave is a place of visitation in al-Najaf. Al-Tusi was succeeded by his son al-Hasan, who was known as al-Mufid al-Thani, and was himself an outstanding scholar.

The learning of al-Shaikh al-Tusi extended over the whole of Islamic studies. He was a learned traditionist, whose two compilations will be discussed below; but he was not only a traditionist, he was also an authoritative jurist, who could interpret traditions to meet the needs of jurisprudence, and many of his works on jurisprudence and the principles of jurisprudence still survive, in particular al-Mabsut and al-Nihaya.

In addition, he was the leading Shi'ite theologian of his time. As well as writing works of a general theological nature, he also wrote specific works on individual topics. On the Imamate, he wrote Talkhis al-Shafi, which was based on al-Sharif al-Murtada's al-Shafi fi 'l-imama. He wrote a work on al-Ghaiba, the occultation of the 12th Imam.

As a traditionist, he naturally had an interest in the men who related traditions, in his Kitab al-rijal, he tries to list most of the important Shi'ites. His Fihrist is an important work of Shi'ite bibliography. In it he lists many of the works of early Shi'ite writers and sometimes gives an account of their writers and the contents of the works. This work may to some extent reflect al-Tusi's own library before it was so tragically destroyed.

The title of this work could be translated as “The Refinement of the Laws (as Discussed) in Terms of the Explanation of the Sufficiency”. “The Sufficiency” or al-Muqni’a was a work on traditions by al-Shaikh al-Mufid, the teacher of al-Tusi, who has been mentioned earlier. Thus the original intention of al-Tusi had been to write a commentary on al-Muqni’a of al-Mufid. However, he makes it clear in his introduction that his work would only concern the furu’ of Islamic law, i.e. the practical regulations for carrying out the sharia, the holy law of Islam.

He said: “I went first to the chapter which was connected with ritual purity (tahara), leaving aside the (chapters) which preceded it, which were about the Unity of God (tawhid), Justice (‘adl), Prophethood (nubuwwa) and the Imamate (imama), because the explanation of these would be too lengthy, and also because it was not the intention of this book to elucidate the principles of religion (al-usul).”

In his introduction, al-Tusi makes it clear that the principal motive for writing this work and limiting it to the furu’, was the great differences which were arising in Shi’ite traditions. He mentions that these differences were being used against the Shi’a by their opponents as an argument against the truth of Shi’ite beliefs. The situation had become so critical that al-Tusi reports al-Mufid’s account of one Shi’ite adherent who had left the community because of the contradictory traditions.

Al-Tusi set himself the task of analysing the traditions concerned with furu’, explaining which traditions were deficient and reconciling apparent contradictions in sound traditions. He used al-Mufid’s al-Maqni’a as the basis for this task. However, he did not only deal with the traditions used in al-Muqni’a; he analysed many more traditions which he included at the end of various sections, appendices of traditions not mentioned by al-Mufid, which he also discusses.

The method used is to quote the traditions and then al-Mufid’s comments on them. This is often followed by al-Tusi’s explanation of al-Mufid’s comments. Sometimes, it is not always clear whether the explanation belongs to al-Mufid or al-Tusi. However, he quite often makes it clear that it is al-Mufid when he says: “Al Shaikh said...” But sometimes a discussion is introduced by the ambiguous terms: “He said...” This could refer to either al-Mufid or al-Tusi. In the appendices al-Tusi makes it quite clear that he is making the comments, for he says: “Muhammad b. al-Hasan said...”

The discussions on the traditions are sometimes of considerable length. An example is the discussion of the method of performing ritual ablutions, there quotations are made from Arabic verse to support the Shi’ite version of rubbing the feet instead of washing them.

The work is divided into chapters (kutub) and the chapters into sections (abwab) with appendices following when appropriate. The work is a very comprehensive study of Shi'ite traditions and consists of the following chapters:

al-Tahara
Ritual Purity

al-Salat
Formal Prayer

al-Zakat
Alms Tax

al-Siyam
Fasting

al-Hajj
Pilgrimage

al-Jihad
Sacred War

al-Qadaya wa-‘l-ahkam
Judgements and Legal Requirements

al-Makasib Acquisitions

al-Tijarat
Trading

al-Nikah
Marriage

al-Talaq
Divorce
It is said that al-Tusi began this work during the life of al-Mufid and had reached the end of the chapter on “Ritual Purity” by the time of his death (413 A.H.). However the work was not finally finished until al-Tusi moved to al-Najaf (448 A.H.).

One of the remarkable features of this work is that despite the great number of traditions, which had become known to al-Tusi since the time of al-Kulaini and Ibn Babawaih, al-Tusi’s interpretation of what are the correct traditions, preserves Shi’ite law in a very similar position to that of al-Kulaini and Ibn Babawaih.

The reason for the great spread of diverse traditions during the period from al-Kulaini’s death to al-Tusi’s (328/9 A.H.) death (460 A.H.) may have been the fact that this was a period in which the Buyids held sway in Baghdad; they were very sympathetic towards the Shi’a. Thus, this was a period in which the Shi’a were not persecuted and could admit their beliefs without too much fear. In such circumstances, there was much more opportunity for outsiders to bring extraneous traditions into the Shi'ite corpus.

However al–Tusi had available to him many of the early works of Usul which had been available to the earlier Shiite compilers of collections of traditions. Al–Tusi says about this work: “When our companions looked at the akhbar (traditions) connected with what is permitted and forbidden (al–halal wa–l–haram) which we had collected in it, they saw that they included most of what the sections of laws connected with jurisprudence. In all its sections and its chapters, only very little of the traditions of our companions, their books, usul and compilations has escaped.

Al–Istibsar fima 'khtalaf al–akhbar

Al–Istibsar is the fourth and last of the major works of Shi'ite Islamic traditions. It covers the same field as Tahdhib al–ahkam but is considerably smaller. Al–Tusi mentions that his colleagues, after seeing the size of Tahdhib al–ahkam considered: “...... It would be useful that there should be a reference (madhkur) book which a beginner could use in his study of jurisprudence, or one who has finished, to remind himself, or the intermediate (student) to study more deeply.

Thus (so that) all of them could obtain what they need and reach their soul's desire, what is connected with different traditions would be set in an abridged way . . . Therefore they asked me to summarize it (Tahdhib al–ahkam) and devote care to its compilation and abridgement, and to begin each section with an introduction about what I relied on for the legal decisions and traditions in it; then I should follow with those traditions which disagree and explain the reconciliation between the two without leaving out anything which was influential.

I would follow my practice in my big book mentioned earlier (i.e. Tahdhib al–ahkam) and at the beginning of the book, I would explain briefly how traditions are weighed against each other, and how the practice of something was possible through (the authority) of (some of) them to the exclusion of the rest ...” Al–Tusi, then, follows this statement with a brief but comprehensive and clear outline of the principles of jurisprudence.

As can be seen from al–Tusi's own introduction, al–Istibsar is essentially a summary of Tahdhib al–ahkam. Its methods are similar but briefer; there are not so many traditions used in the work and the explanations are more concise. In many ways it is closer to Man la yahduruh al–faqih, although unlike the latter it gives full isnads for the traditions quoted. However it is possible to say that al–Kafi and Tahdhib al–ahkam represent comprehensive collections of traditions, while Man la yahduruh al–faqih and al–Istibsar are books intended to be used as ready reference works for students and scholars.

The collections and commentaries of Shi'ite traditions did not end with al–Tusi but his works mark the high point in this process. It had begun with al–Kulaini, whose al–Kafi, while not the first collection, was certainly the first major collection based on the early works of usul. The process had been continued by Ibn Babawaih; in his introduction to Man la yahduruh al–faqih he makes it clear that he had also used these usul. Al–Tusi, the author of the other two major works of Shi'ite traditions also admits his dependence on these early works.

As has already been pointed out, these three authors and their four major works of tradition present a generally consistent picture of Shi'ite Islamic legal thinking. It is a remarkable picture of tradition and shows that, whatever the vagaries of individuals may have been, leading Shi'ite scholars had a clear and consistent view of their traditions.
